Moderato

Though dreams are sweet and bright are fairy fancies, There is a fairy-land in earth-ly life:

The humblest man can have his own romances,
And share at

Though life is hard, yet meet the days with laughter, A merry heart has always songs to sing: If nights are dark, there's golden morning after And winter's snow will make the flowers of Spring: The earth is old and yet is ever joyous, Though every year she feels the winter's spell: Let us forget the worries that annoy us, Laugh on and love and all will yet be well. Castles in the air above you Ever vanish
